Below are some options that may either reduce the cost of or provide coverage for your medication for panic attacks:

- Generic drugs—Several brand name medications on the list above are available as generic drugs. A generic drug works like the brand-name drug in dosage, strength, performance and use, and must meet the same quality and safety standards. All generic drugs are reviewed and approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. Generic drugs are less expensive than brand medications. If you are taking a brand name drug, check with your physician or pharmacist to find out if a generic drug is available for your medication and is appropriate for your specific situation.
- Discuss your medications with your doctor—Your doctor may be able to switch you to another medication that works just as good as the medication you are now taking and is not excluded from Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage. Only your doctor can make this switch for you. Do not stop taking your medication or switch to another medication on your own.
- “Enhanced coverage plans” through Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage—Some Medicare Prescription Drug Plans may offer “enhanced coverage” that includes medications for panic attacks that are excluded from the “standard coverage” provided by Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage. If you decide to enroll in Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage, you may consider choosing an enhanced coverage plan that covers these excluded medications. Please note that the premiums for enhanced coverage plans may be much greater than the standard coverage plans.

- Pharmaceutical company patient assistance programs—You may be eligible for assistance offered by pharmaceutical companies. These programs provide certain medications at a very low cost based on a person's income and needs. The specific medication you take may or may not be included in a pharmaceutical company patient assistance program.
- Pharmaceutical company discount cards— Some pharmaceutical companies have programs or prescription cards that will allow qualified persons to get medications at a discounted price. The specific medication you take may or may not be included as part of a pharmaceutical company discount card program.
- Other Options—The following programs may pay for some or all of the medications that are excluded from the Medicare Prescription Drug Coverage. If you currently receive prescription benefits or assistance from any of the following programs, you may want to consider checking into whether the program will cover your excluded medications.
 - Your State Medicaid Program
 - Your State Pharmacy Assistance Program (if available in your state)
 - The Department of Veterans Affairs Health Benefits
 - TRICARE for retired military service members and their spouses
 - CHAMPVA
